Profile

Anthony is an associate attorney in Dunn Carney's Construction & Design and Public Agency Representation practice groups. His practice focuses on commercial construction, public contracting, commercial real estate, and municipal and administrative law matters. He joined Dunn Carney from a boutique construction law firm in Portland, Oregon, where he represented private owners, public entities, developers, builders, general contractors, subcontractors, suppliers, architects, engineers, and sureties in advisory, transactional, and litigation matters.

Prior to entering private practice, Anthony graduated from the University of Oregon School of Law, where he served as a Sustainable Land Use Fellow with the University's Environmental and Natural Resources Law Center and as Judicial Extern to the Honorable Michael J. McShane, Chief Judge of the United States District Court for the District of Oregon.

Outside the office, Anthony enjoys spending time with his wife and their pets, playing pickup basketball, and cheering on the Oregon Ducks, Portland Trail Blazers, and Chelsea FC.
